Introduction

As the name suggests, Sun Yat-sen Parks commemorate Sun Yat-sen (1866-1925). According to information on hand, there are 106 Sun Yat-sen Parks worldwide, scattered across the Greater China Region, the United States, Canada, and Singapore. It is beyond doubt that having these parks is an important way to memorialize the life of Sun Yat-sen. By setting up this online exhibition, we hope visitors can learn more about the history and landscape of the Parks in different places. Photos with captions can be seen throughout the website, allowing visitors to have a decent visual experience of the Parks in a convenient manner.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen Memorial Park (Honolulu, U.S.A.)

Dr. Sun Yat-sen Memorial Park (Honolulu) was built in 2005 and was known as Chinatown Gateway Park. At that time, there was a proposal to dedicate a monument to Dr. Sun Yat Sen in the park. [1] 2007 was the 10th anniversary of Honolulu's sister-city relationship with Zhongshan, Sun Yat-sen's hometown in Guangdong. The park was renamed Dr. Sun Yat-sen Memorial Park to commemorate the friendship of the cities and the history of Dr. Sun Yat Sen in Honolulu. [2] Sun Yat-sen Hawaii Foundation donated a statue of Dr. Sun Yat Sen in order to support the construction of the park. [3] The foundation's webpage states, "to honor of the occasion, the Sun Yat-sen Hawaii Foundation commissioned 'A School Boy in Hawaii', a bronze statue created by Master Chu Tatshing, depicting Dr. Sun at age thirteen." [4] On 12 November 2007, Honolulu Mayor Mufi Hannemann and Zhongshan Vice Mayor Feng Yurong dedicated the park in a ceremony.

Sun Yat Sen Memorial Park (Sai Ying Pun, Hong Kong)

Sun Yat Sen Memorial Park (Sai Ying Pun) is located on the harbour in Central and Western district, near the exit of the Western Harbour Crossing. It covers 4.1 hectares of reclaimed land outside Sam Kok Pier. [1] When Dr. Sun Yat Sen was forced out of Hong Kong by the British government, he moored his boat offshore at this site and met his friends and supporters many times. The park was built to commemorate the relationship between Dr. Sun Yat Sen and Hong Kong. The proposal of constructing a Sun Yat Sen Memorial Park was raised early in 1966 by the Preparatory Committee in commemoration of the 100th birthday of the Father of the Nation. However, it was not implemented. [2] In 1999, the Urban Council agreed to construct a park in the Western district. [3] The construction was divided into different stages. A temporary park was opened in 2003, which was controversial because there was no commemoration to Dr. Sun. [4] In 2006, the design of the second construction stage was published. [5] In 2007, Hong Kong Leisure and Cultural Services Department, with the Public Works Subcommittee of The Legislative Council, submitted a construction plan. In early 2008, construction of the park began. [6] The park was partly opened in 2010. Later, other facilities, such as the swimming pool, were incrementally completed. [7]

Shanghai Zhongshan Park

Shanghai Zhongshan Park is located in Changning district, covering 20 hectares. It was a private garden owned by Ejenner Hogg, a British businessman of Jessfield trading company. [1] When the Taiping Rebellion was approaching Shanghai, Hogg purchased the land in Changning district at a low price, and therefore this area was also known as Jessfield land. [2] Later, parts of the Jessfield land were sold to the Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. for St. John University. [3] In 1914, Shanghai Public Entertainment Commission and Entertainment Fund Trusteeship Council held a joint meeting and decided to subsidize the Municipal Council with 20,000 taels of silver for land purchase and park construction. The purchase was approved the same year by a taxpayer meeting. [4] After the completion of the construction, the park was named Fanwangdu park, or Jessfield park. [5] It was not open to Chinese before 1928. [6] In 1941, the park was renamed Zhongshan Park to commemorate Dr. Sun Yat Sen. The name is still in use today. [7] In addition to the retaining of the original landscaping style in Zhongshan park after 1949, the Shanghai government has continuously funded the alterations and additions works.
